CID REALIZES HETSCO INVESTMENT

Indianapolis, IN - September 16, 2008: CID Capital announced today that it has realized its investment in Hetsco, Inc. ("Hetsco" or the "Company"). Headquartered in Greenwood, Indiana, Hetsco is the leading independent provider of repair and maintenance services for brazed aluminum plate-fin heat exchangers used in industrial gas, liquefied natural gas and chemical facilities, as well as a specialty provider of construction and fabrication services for the industrial gas industry. During CID's investment period the Company built upon its leading market position in the repair of cryogenic aluminum heat exchangers and expanded into facility construction, plant relocation and additional services.

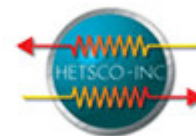

Ralph Canter, President of Hetsco, commented, "CID Capital provided Hetsco with both capital and strategic guidance as we expanded the business. The company is positioned well for future growth, and Steve Cobb and John Aplin at CID Capital played a meaningful role in helping set the course for our success."

"Hetsco's management has been exceptional in expanding the business," said Steve Cobb, Managing Director of CID Capital. "Overall, the Hetsco transaction is consistent with CID's goal of realizing strong returns for our limited partners through transitioning small entrepreneurial run companies into professionally managed enterprises. Ralph Canter and his team executed the growth strategies well and have positioned the company for the next phase of growth."

Hetsco was acquired by Platte River Ventures, a Denver-based private equity firm focused on investing in small and middle market operating companies.

About Hetsco, Inc.

Hetsco is a global industrial services company providing welding repair and equipment fabrication services to customers in the industrial gas, petrochemical, petroleum, power, and other manufacturing industries.
